

JOHANNA FRÖHLICH is a senior research fellow at the Research Institute for Politics and Government, within the Eötvös József Research Centre, at the Ludovika University for Public Service. She holds an LL.M. from the University of Notre Dame, IN, USA and a Ph.D. in Law from the Pázmány Péter Catholic University, Hungary.

Previously, she worked as research assistant professor in the Faculty of Law, at the Pontifical Catholic University of Chile, and at the Law School of the University San Francisco de Quito, Ecuador. In Ecuador she served as Director of the Institute for Legal Research, as well as Director of Post-Graduate Studies. Her research interests include legal and political philosophy, natural law, constitutional theory, legal reasoning, comparative constitutional law, and law and courts. In the past years she led a regional academic project on Constitutional Reasoning in Latin America and the Caribbean, which is forthcoming at Hart Publishing in September 2024. Currently, she is working on a project on Analytic Thomism and New Natural Law. Johanna has been teaching since 2008, and her courses range from legal reasoning and comparative constitutional law to constitutional theory and research methodology, in English, Spanish and Hungarian. She has been a visiting research fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law various times, and has taught in Master's courses and summers schools in México, Italy, or Uruguay. She has co-authored her first book on the new Hungarian Fundamental Law in Hungarian (Gondolat 2012) and has published for instance on "Law as reason for action" in the Encyclopedia of the Philosophy of Law and Social Philosophy (Springer 2018) or on constitutional amendment rules in Ecuador in the International Journal of Constitutional Law. Her publications can be found in Hungarian, English, Spanish and in Polish.
